[IS. PER ANNUM, POST FREE.]

Dear Friends,

The Peace Terms have been presented to the Turkish Delegation since our last publication. But the political situation in the Near East remains unsatisfactory, and conditions there for the Armenians are as bad, if not much worse, than at any previous time.

In Cilicia, Anatolia, and the Caucasus, unrest and uncertainty prevail, in consequence of which progress in the relief and orphanage work is sadly hampered. At Hadjin it is reported there were some 10,000 inhabitants, including orphans, on the verge of starvation. A large number of these we have been informed, have been transferred to Killis and Aleppo. These unfortunate victims of Turkish oppression must be cared for and will need continuous aid, for their physical strength is greatly weakened by the strain of many weeks of privation and suffering.

Thousands of refugees and orphans have evacuated Aintab; quite a large proportion of this company has arrived at Aleppo, and 2,000 have been taken to Beirut. Among the latter number are Miss Frearson with her 200 orphans. Her letter from Aintab, though belated, filled us with thankfulness, and later a telegram from Beirut told of her safe arrival there with her orphaned children. Her wonderful delivery from the power of the Turks after being so cut off from the world, while at Aintab, gives cause for praise and deep thanksgiving. But 200 orphans in a strange town and without a home, will require a large sum of money to support them. At the rate of 10/- per child per week, the cost of maintaining these children will be £5,200 per year. A representative of the British Syrian Mission at Aintab kindly arranged to accommodate Miss Frearson and her big family, temporarily, in one of their buildings. This house has received much damage at the hands of the Turks; and to restore it will cost at least £460. Who will assist us to have this place repaired so that Miss Frearson may be enabled to carry on her labour of love amongst the little ones?

The latest information regarding Miss Salmond at Marash, comes from Miss Davies who reports our dear friend's progress after her accident. Direct communication with her is cut off, but occasionally she manages to get a letter through to the outside world.

Miss Davies has joined Miss Cunningham at Brumana, where doubtless she will find full scope for her abounding energies. The special appeal on behalf of the orphans, which comes from her, is sufficient evidence of the urgent need. Our friends will readily realise how imperative is the call to succour these little ones. Further information from her will be found on page 4.

A conference of French, Swiss and English Armenian Societies is to be held in Paris on July 6th. An invitation was extended to our President, but Lady Frederick Cavendish was unable to attend, and the Rev. Harold Buxton has consented to represent our Committee as well as that of the Lord Mayor's Fund. Lady Frederick Cavendish sent a letter of sympathy to the members of the various Societies meeting at the Conference.

At the House of Commons on July 14th, a conference of representatives from British and American Societies interested in Armenia, will be held. Mr. Charles Vickrey, Secretary of the Near East Relief Society, New York, will be present. It is likely that the future work of each Society represented will be discussed.

Negotiations have been going forward for the new scheme mentioned in last magazine, and arrangements are so far favourable. Enquiry has been made of the Friends' Foreign Mission Association as to whether their centre at Brumana might be used by us as a place of safety for Armenian orphans. The result is that we have agreed to be responsible for the Industrial part of the Mission work at Brumana, and must do our utmost to ensure that relief and orphan work there will develop, seeing that Armenians are still forced to fly from their homes. The workers now there, Miss T. H. Cunningham (formerly our representative at Port Said) and Miss Ethel Eckroyd, are to be entirely supported by us. Mr. O. S. Heaton, another worker on the spot, will be partially supported by us. These workers will continue their activities under the "Friends of Armenia" supervision, and it is probable their work will increase and develop. Already 150 Armenian orphans of the number just landed at Beirut have been taken into the Brumana Orphanage, and we anticipate safe and thoroughly satisfactory work in this beautiful spot on the Lebanon.

The sufferings and agony of the Armenians are realised by a very few. To have a quiet shelter as a place of safety and peace on the Lebanon will mean so much to those who have left their homes, for peace of mind is not known in the troubled towns and villages of Cilicia. Their strength will be renewed, the orphans will be well cared for, and useful work provided for them so that, in time, they may become self-supporting. This new development calls for further gifts to replenish our exchequer. To-day the grief-torn country of Armenia lies prostrate. It is our part to resuscitate a portion of the remnant of Armenians, and encourage them to continue to "stand fast" in their Christian faith.

Yours gratefully,

MARGARET RUSSELL,

Secretary.

Aintab, March 19, 1920.
Received May 19th, 1920.

My dear Miss Russell,

From what one hears there is the possibility of getting letters out by aeroplane when one comes, so am going to have one for you ready. In the last mail I got was your letter telling of your most kind and welcome gift of £300 (what a time it seems since we had any mail), and yesterday I got word from the bank that there was money for us. Just at present all Christians are boycotted, and we cannot get what we need, so we are doing the best we can, and with exception of flour, we had got our winter things in; we have had to buy bread which has been very difficult, for they would not sell wheat at one time to Christians, and there is only one baker's shop in the Christian quarter, and when they managed to get a little wheat, which they mix with a lot of Indian corn, then the wood gave out, and it was forbidden to sell to Christians. If you will kindly send the money to the National Bank of Egypt to be credited to me at the Alexandria Branch it will be the safest way, for I can quickly get it when the roads are open. At one time Turks would not sell milk to us foreigners, then later almost doubled the price, so I decided to do without. One day when convalescent from influenza, and longing for a cup of tea with milk, I opened that last tin of evaporated milk that kind Mr. and Mrs. Orpin gave me when last home in 1911. It was beautiful; it has been such a blessing to us. If you ever have the opportunity, I shall be grateful if you will let them know, for I have not their address. We praise for every day that passes in peace and quietness. Many are being sorely tried. The small quantities of cereals, etc. that can be bought are very dear, no work, only a few shops in the Christian quarter open. There has been an epidemic of influenza and many deaths. I had twenty-five cases. After I had nursed seven I had it, and was almost well again when the next one began. Although we had some who were very ill, high temperatures and hemorrhages, pleurisy, etc., and no doctor able to get through to us, when some of the worst cases were in it, yet all recovered, and we felt we had cause for very much praise. The cold was so intense, and snowdrifts so deep, that for five days our man could not get to us, so felt we could not ask a doctor to come. Dr. Shepard had most kindly attended to first cases, myself also, so that I had learned what to do, so that was a comfort. We felt we had cause for a lot of praise, though so unworthy. It made a deep impression on many of the children, and we have had a work of grace in the home, and many young lips are testifying that they belong to God and shewing great change in their lives, especially do we see the latter in some of the older girls who before the war belonged to fairly well-to-do families. Our hearts bled for Marash and the workers there, especially poor dear Miss Salmond with her broken thigh bone, though I rejoice to hear she is much better. It seems dreadful that such things can be happening a few hours away, and yet at the time we know absolutely nothing about it, and even now our thoughts and sympathies are with the poor things in the villages, and we long for news, but nothing authentic comes through. Scarcely a day passes but brigands pass up and down this hill (possibly you may know that our orphanage is some little distance from the city; it stands on a hill opposite to it) often bands of them. A few weeks ago they shot a Turkish Shepherd who was only a little way beyond our house with his flock, and he had not been out with them for many weeks because of the cold, that was his first time this year. He lost his life because he rejected their demand for two sheep for a feast for them! You may have heard about all the rest. Many are almost sick with deferred hope, and wonder how much longer they must wait in this trap. Dr. Shepard's journey to and from Aleppo (he was guaranteed safe passage) was a great strain upon his wife and us all, but he did noble work. The poor

ORPHAN GIRL.

French are completely hemmed in; any move on their part threatens death for the Christians, so that it is difficult to know what to do. We often wonder what the world is doing, whether any steps are being taken to set us free, and many a time we say "If only we could have the roads opened." I must not forget to tell you that we received the box of clothes. What we got was chiefly underclothing with a good coat of waterproof, and it did one good to be reminded that there was such good calico, for it is a LONG time since I saw anything like it, and the kind donors will long be remembered. I gave some to some of my influenza patients when they first got up.

May God bless and reward all kind helpers is our prayer.

Yours gratefully,
KITTY FREARSON.

EXTRACTS OF A LETTER FROM MISS FREARSON TO A FRIEND.

Received May 20th, 1920.

It is awful what the Armenians have to put up with, and unless our Government does something to relieve them speedily I fear they will all be slaughtered. Unless you heard for yourself some of the awful things that the Turks are threatening, you would scarcely believe that such fiends could live. We are here in the Clinic building of the hospital—a building put up on money left by Miss Annie Marston. As we left our home we carried each a bag of food and all who could a quilt, half of which is used as mattress, other half as covering. We each of us put on two changes of underclothing and I wore three dresses. The girls also put on two or three as they had them, but of course the chief things, our food, furniture, etc., had to be left behind, and two days ago when the French went there they reported that the Turks had broken into all rooms and done much damage, so whether anything will be left for us is a question. . . . Any large number of Armenians are not allowed to leave, so many of us prefer to remain with our charges, but our hearts burn at the most awful injustices the A's are subject to. They are defending their part of the city day and night; constant and incessant attacks are being made upon them, and we feel that but for their protection we ourselves might not be here now. No time to write more. . . . God has been very near, real and precious to us, and we have felt sure we were receiving the answers to many prayers. We have no idea how much longer these conditions will continue. We thank God for every day and night that passes and leaves us in safety, though every day almost there are casualties.

KITTY FREARSON.

The Aintab Story.

On April 1, 1920, the large French force left Aintab, taking with them all of the big guns which up to this date had helped to keep peace in the city. The troops had hardly left the city when the trouble started. About thirty Armenians, who were in the market at the time, were killed, and a few taken prisoners. One French officer and twenty-five soldiers were taken prisoners and two soldiers were killed.

As soon as trouble started the streets leading from the Turkish quarters to the Christian quarters were closed, and manned by a few guns in the hands of the Armenians which, although greatly outnumbered, were able to keep off the attacking Turks until the relieving French force arrived eighteen days later.

The Near East Relief evacuated all their buildings in the city, and brought all orphans and rescued women to the Seminary building. Later it was necessary to evacuate Miss Harris' orphanage, which was in direct line with the Turkish fire. The orphans and others were put on half rations. Later it was necessary to cut the food supply to one-third rations.

The siege lasted for twenty days, when a second French relief force arrived from Killis. An ultimatum was issued to the Turks, and since April 21st Aintab has been quiet.

In addition to the members of the American Board stationed at Aintab, Miss Eddy and Mr. Travis, N.E.R.

workers, are remaining in the city. Mr. Boyd, the Director, who came to Constantinople to report to the High Commissioner, will return in the near future. They will continue to carry on relief activities, in so far as the limited supplies and unsettled conditions will permit. There is a feeling of great unrest in the city, little ready money, and thousands of people are out of work, so that the need for relief work is great and urgent.

Constantinople Letters.

Constantinople, 4th June, 1920.

My dear Miss Russell,

I am sending the rest of the shoes etc. We hear the sheeting has arrived safely; we expect to get hold of it in a few days. Many thanks for clothing, two parcels safe to hand. Many thanks for everything. There is much unrest here. I am very, very busy; we are now going to put up sheds for looms; we have several costly rugs now in hand for sale.

A. M. BURGESS.

Constantinople, June 4th, 1920.

Dear Miss Russell,

You have written me several times in regard to a shipment you have made for Captain Gracey. We have been doing our best to forward these shipments onward. We have had no end of difficulties both here and at Batoum, but I understand that Captain Gracey has received a part of the shipment, and probably will receive the rest in due time.

Faithfully yours,

W. W. PEET.

LETTER OF THANKS TO A MEMBER OF THE COMMITTEE.

Constantinople, May 20th, 1920.
Received June 29th.

Dear Sir,

The house Committee of Nishan-Tash Girl's Orphanage desires to express their hearty thanks for your kind assistance in sending our orphans 100 £stg. from the "Friends of Armenia."

You will no doubt be interested to know that we have already spent part of the money on replacing the straw uncomfortable pillows of our girls to comfortable cotton ones. We have provided each girl with a black apron and white linen collar which they have sewn themselves. Another important thing has been bath towels, of which they were greatly in need and which are a real blessing. . . . The remaining sum we have decided to invest in materials for fancy-work which the girls are being taught to make, and in selling these we hope to increase our income which is very meagre at present.

May we request you to transmit our most grateful thanks to the "Friends of Armenia," whose kindness to our orphans is greatly appreciated by us all.

We remain,

Yours respectfully,
ZABELLE GUMUSHKERDAN,
Secretary.

President, Mari Nakashian.

"HELP US TO SAVE THE LITTLE ONES."

It is with heavy hearts that we turn again to our faithful friends to implore further help for the unhappy people whose sufferings cry aloud to all the world for succour in their helplessness. What words can we use by which to express all the pain and sorrow, the apprehension and bitter disappointment we feel at the miscarriage of our hopes for the future of the country on behalf of which we have so long worked and prayed.

Miss Annie Davies, who did never-to-be-forgotten work at Adana, writes from Beyrout of "this sad land, for its need is something tremendous," and again "the situation is more grave than it has ever been before." Hadjin is again in the hands of the Turks, and in Adana, writes Dr. Chambers, they "do not know what may happen at any moment." Aintab is in a fearful condition. "In five days," says Miss Davies, "I have seen misery enough to fill a lifetime." Miss Frearson has arrived at Beyrout with 2,000 refugees from Aintab, and has, under her care, 200 children, all of whom require every necessity of life. In Antioch, we are told that there are 5,000 refugees settled in the village of Debejl Musa; they are eating herbs and sprouts of trees for their sole food, and starvation must shortly ensue, unless help comes. From all over the country these accounts arrive, and assistance is implored in order to keep alive the sorely tried remnant of the race. In this England of ours, how can we realise it all? But it is true, and whilst we are enjoying peace and plenty—in comparison—these brothers and sisters of ours, equally God's children, are enduring torments from which death must come as a relief! Only imagine what it must be to witness the sufferings of their innocent little ones and be helpless to aid them! Can agony be greater? In the Lebanon they are safe, and God grant that means may be forthcoming to transfer them thither. But, action is more than ever needed, and there is something definite that we can at once undertake. We can help to establish the poor little orphans from Aintab in Brumana, where they will be cherished, well cared for, and trained to become self-supporting, self-respecting men and women. We can help to place and support other children in the Lebanon, and assist the refugees there to live and regain health and mental poise after their awful experiences—and there are other ways of helping if only sufficient means be forthcoming. And so we are importunate beggars again! beggars for these peoples' lives, and for the future and well being of their country—beggars for the remnant of the race, without which Armenia cannot live—beggars for the Christian religion, for they have suffered unspeakable horrors for their faith, and yet remained steadfast! We thank and bless our helpers in the past, and once more leave our cause in their hands, knowing that they will not fail us.

Faithfully and most gratefully yours,
MARY HICKSON (Mrs.),
Hon. Sec.

Syria News.

Brumana, May 24, 1920.
Received June 10th.

Dear Mr. Brooks,

I have your letter of April 24 to thank you for, and which did not arrive so quickly as some do. By now you may have met Mr. Fox and have heard of various matters connected with the work here. News is just to hand that the French are retiring from the Lebanon—I wonder what will be the result. Anyway, it has so far been quite peaceful, and no disturbances of any kind in our immediate neighbourhood.

I note that you say that Miss Annie Davies is likely to come out for a time before going on to Adana. A recent letter from Mrs. Chambers says that though things have been bad there, and are not yet normal by any means, she would not say "do not come" to Miss Davies. So if Miss Davies does arrive in Beyrout and up here, we shall be very glad to see her and make use of her, until she feels it possible to go on to Adana. The A.C.R.N.E. would be able to get her there easily from Beyrout, as they are continually sending up workers and goods etc., at least, that is what Miss Talbot tells me.

Our classes for girls go steadily on though with lesser numbers, because it is still silk-worm season. After about three weeks we expect our workrooms to be very full again. I sent some of our embroidery work to Miss Russell a week or two ago, just a few samples, to see if they reach safely. Do tell me if you know whether it was our poor refugees from Port Said who were in the dreadful massacre of last February. I am often thinking of them, and especially the Andreassian family; I should so much like to get news of them. Letters from Port Said tell me that ladies there are missing the nice goods made in the Armenian Camp. It will be some time before we can meet that need from here; I do not like to venture to make use of it. I am not getting on with sales at all, simply because I have no time for that, nor for working out how things are to be priced. One thing I am glad of, is that we are having Reading, Arithmetic and Scripture taught regularly in our Industries, also Hymn singing. It is a good arrangement for the girls to get a break in their hand work, for these subjects especially, as so few can read. I always meant this to be a strong feature in the scheme for Industrial work in Brumana, and am so thankful that the way seems to be opening out for developing this part of our plans. Did I tell you that Miss Ethel Eckroyd, one of our former missionaries here, is probably on her way out here to specially superintend this scholastic side of the work, which is quite in her line. It is very interesting to see the big improvements, not only in the health of our girls (we have a small clinic especially for them every day), but in their appearance and manners. They seem so very much happier and brighter and keen on their work. Their behaviour is excellent, they give no trouble at all and seem so grateful. I long to see the work spreading and developing like it must do to be self-supporting. At present the only way to do is to go slowly. The weather is most lovely here now, warm but fresh, and cool nights. I have not yet received the dolls eyes, but hope they will arrive soon and not get stolen. Our girls are getting to make quite good dolls of a certain kind, and we as often as possible let them learn a new kind of toy. Just now we are starting crochet wool toys, made from the native wool, hand spun, and stuffed with all sorts of odd scraps from the Relief Clothing Industries. I have a quantity of needle lace doyleys made and some handkerchiefs, but do not know how to get them safely to England.

Yours sincerely,
T. H. CUNNINGTON.

Brumana.

Dear Miss Russell,

We have only just got the one loom that has arrived so far fixed up, and the next thing will be to find women to teach. So it will be some months before we shall have any cloth for sale. I am able to buy enough for my embroidery class to keep that going. I get it from a village near here. The handkerchief linen and the tray cloth linen were indeed a very long time coming! We have only quite recently received part of it by parcel post, and the rest with the goods. It is very awkward being so short-handed, but we hope soon to get some temporary help at any rate, and later some experienced business man, without which we could not make much progress. Our little class of handkerchief workers get on but slowly, at present they only seem to make about two per week! There must be so many months spent over learning before these girls can work well and quickly. I am sending a few samples by post. I have just received two

The Secretary "Friends of Armenia."

Dear Madam,

The unmixed Christian sympathy and generously practical humanity which your society has so kindly shown to my nation, and especially to my own people in the past, encourages us to look up to you again in our present exigency. My people and I have returned from Port Said five to eight months ago, and have found here the survivors of the deportation, who had already returned from their terrible exile. Now we are 5,000 again, settled in the villages of Djebel Musa.

The condition of this poor people at present is barely lamentable. This is the result of many circumstances working together. One kilo of wheat costs here now nine or ten piastres. Many people, women as well as men, are being obliged to transport the cereal which they have to buy at Antioch on their backs to their villages four to six hours' walk away, thus to spare at least the money that they should spend for transportation. They have patiently suffered living in rags, in houses without window-shutters, and without doors, but now hunger has taken them to the verge of the grave. They have been unable to sow, because many of them arrived here too late, and others had no means to get the necessary oxen and children to bring some wood for combs, fainted of hunger on the way, and could not be resuscitated till a piece of bread was offered to him. If some helping hand is not stretched to us, it will not be long before starvation arrives here to end many lives. Anything which you can do to relieve this poor people will be the most humane and the most Christian thing, and will make you the object of our renewed and boundless obligation. Cheques upon the Beyrout banks can be cashed here in Antioch.

Respectfully yours,

DIKRAN ANDREASSIAN.

The name of Rev. Dikran Andreassian will be remembered by many of our readers. He was at Port Said from 1915 to 1919, and was Pastor to the Protestant Armenians at the Camp. Mrs. Andreassian was most helpful in assisting Miss Cunningham with the embroidery work while at Port Said.—[Ed.]

implements. The Japonica fruits, which would be quite a revenue to many in this season, were totally destroyed under heavy snows in winter. Comb-making and spoon-making, the two main trades in those villages, have failed to give the expected support, because political circumstances hinder the merchants in Antioch to send them to their proper markets. And the American Relief for the Near East, which had been reduced to its minimum since a time, has just been closed altogether.

The result is cries of hunger and boundless misery. Poor people! Only one way have they found to mitigate their misery, eating herbs and the sprouts of vines and some other trees. Like locusts they have stripped some vines of all their leaves. On one occasion a boy pulled up a sprout of a bay and began to chew it. The owner of the tree who was watching said, "Boy, that is bay, it is bitter, you can't eat it." "I do not mind what it is," said the boy. No bread has touched my mouth since two days." On another occasion a man who was going with his wife and Brumana, June 27th, 1920.

Dear Mr. Brooks,

You will now know that Miss Davies has arrived quite safely, and very glad indeed I am to have her. It is settled that we offer our Girls' school building for the Armenians now on the sands on Beyrout shore. The Near East American Society who brought them here are clearing out the few little Syrian orphan girls still left in our building, and after a good clean, they will, we expect, be very glad to fill it with some of these poor Armenian girls. It will take 100, and probably they will arrange to have another 50 in a little group of houses near by. I am so truly glad that the way has opened for us to have made this offer, especially as we hear that accommodation is so very difficult to find anywhere, and the poor things must at least spend the winter in these parts, so tents will be impossible for more than a few months. More than ever am I glad to have Miss Davies, and she will probably take over the Departments we shall open for Armenians, as she knows Turkish well. I long to much, she seems to be a real worker and enjoys having plenty to do. Also the knowledge of Arabic is very useful. I was prepared to find her very useful as those who knew her in Beyrout spoke so highly of her. I also met her once myself, years ago. She seems to be fitting in very well in every way, so far, and likes Brumana very much. I am glad that we could take her in at the house where I am staying myself. It is the Mission House that is about five minutes walk from the rooms we use for the Industries. We have had many difficulties to contend with, and some of them have been serious handicaps to our progress—the latter is not nearly so rapid here as it was in Port Said—but I do think we shall get on better now, as various things seem to be smoothing out. I do not think I have ever had such a hard job as I have had here till recently. I have often remembered Miss Burgess telling me of the uphill work she had when she first started her splendid work at Constantinople. The disturbed state of trade, shipping, etc., all add to the difficulties. I wonder whether you have heard any-be able to write and say that the whole of the 150 are here, and busy at work. It would be well to send out a few more thousands of linen handkerchief squares (I have only a few hundred), also linen for the drawn thread work, and the Rug Canvas for making Raffia bags—the narrowest kinds. As you remember, I have a fine quantity of Raffia, but cannot make much use of it till I have the canvas. The Bill of Lading for the two more looms is to hand—we shall be so glad to get them. So far we have set up the one loom, and Mr. Heaton is teaching two girls to weave with coarse cotton. We hope in a few weeks to get them on to weaving that nice coloured cotton, red, green and blue, which you sent out, and which we just revel in the possession of. I use it for embroidery—it is especially useful for beginners. I have also had a small quantity of it woven in a village near here, so that my girls could have some to work on while waiting for Mr. Heaton's class to be able to supply it. The native looms can only make it very narrow, and therefore not nearly so serviceable. Miss Talbot left me a few days before Miss Davies arrived. I like the latter very thing further of knitting and sewing machinery—any kind of the latter would be most useful—ours are very few and old. The dolls eyes have not come, perhaps they may yet. That bale of knitting wool that you sent out on the "Scottish Prince" may yet be found in the Custom House. I hear that is in a most congested state. I will put in a little note to Miss Russell to ask if she can get me the handkerchief linen and thread in readiness for the Armenians. Miss Davies will give you her impressions of the bit of work I have been able to get done. With many thanks for all your thought of the work, and every thing you have done.

Yours very sincerely,

THEODORA H. CUNNINGTON.

P.S.—I am so glad to be allowed to introduce some scholastic subjects with the hand work. One and a half hours of school work is compulsory for every girl each day, and this week we start an evening school for outworkers and elder girls. The doctor here is going to give them a course of simple addresses "How to Keep Healthy," and other friends will teach Geography, Reading, Writing, etc., and we expect that all the Syrian teachers will give their services.

ARMENIA'S FUTURE.

Paris, July 7th.

The International Conference on Armenia, which is being held at Paris, has sent a letter to the Supreme Council requesting that measures should be taken without delay to support the Armenian Republic, and stating that the Conference had decided to establish a Phil-Armenian League with its seat at Geneva. The British Government has been requested not to withdraw its troops from Black sea ports until provision has been made for the protection of the Armenians in those districts. Finally, the Conference requested the United States to renew its contract for provisioning Armenia for 1920-1921.—Reuter.

THE MANDATE FOR ARMENIA.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, answering Dr. Murray (Western Isles, Ind.), said:—The present position with regard to the mandate for Armenia is that the United States Government have refused to accept it, and the League of Nations have declared themselves unwilling to offer it to any other Power pending information on certain points, one of which is Armenia's access to the sea. No information can be furnished on this point until President Wilson's recommendations as to the Armenian frontiers have been received.

Marash News.

Marash, 18th June, 1920.
Received 12th July.

My dear Miss Russell,

Dr. Lambert, Director of the A.C.R.N.E., came in here yesterday. We are so glad to see anyone from the outside. He works in Aleppo; he tells us all the orphans have gone from Aintab, also Miss Frearson. He does not seem to know much of the Political world or what may happen; only hopes as we all do, that things are to be better. This poor persecuted people are rather downcast; what are they to do? It seems there is no desire to rebuild their burned houses, neither to restore in any form their losses. It is a grave problem. Relief has to be carefully distributed, so that all may have a little share. Now the summer and its heat is here, but our little house in the vineyard where we used to go for a change—that too is all in ruins, not a beam left. I long for a breath of fresher air, but as I cannot yet walk without assistance, I just sit around at the open window, or with assistance get to the verandah. Dr. Lambert says if letters are addressed to A.C.S. Aleppo, c/o American Relief, and request each to be forwarded, I may occasionally get a note from you. We cannot communicate with Constantinople, but Mr. Peet finds a way to send on money.

Our dear friend, Miss Blakely, who has been in Marash over 30 years and all through this war, goes with Dr. Lambert to-morrow to Aleppo en route for her Homeland. She needs the rest. As yet I do not see that I can move in my present condition, but I am praying every day for patience and for direction.

Appeal from the Conference of Armenians, Adana.

AMERICAN MISSION.

April 21st, 1920.

Dr. W. N. Chambers, our esteemed Missionary.
Honoured Sir,

You will call to mind that in 1909 amongst the 20,000 Armenians who were massacred there were 28 of our brethren—two missionaries and 26 native pastors, preachers and other workers caught in the storm as they were on their way to Conference in Adana. It was impossible to hold any meeting at that time. Since those atrocities no conference has been held in Adana until the 14th of this month (April) when all missionaries and all pastors and preachers—a company of 22—came together and held conference here. The native workers were here, not on invitation, but as refugees having, as if by miracle, escaped from new Turkish massacres. Some of them with insufficient clothing, without shoes and on foot succeeded in bringing away their children, others were forced to leave their dear ones to the mercy of the Turks. Another after doing all he could to save his mortally wounded wife bade her the last good-bye on the road-side. Still another, knowing that all the members of his family were massacred and burned, escaped alone.

It was very noticeable that during the discussions not one of these men took a moment of time to set forth those sorrowful personal experiences. A more painful question filled the minds of all—the condition of their beloved churches. After previous massacres there remained in 1914 14,864 evangelical people constituting 34 churches and committees in the Adana, Hadjin and Marash Station Fields. (We are unable to obtain definite information from Aintab Station.) Since then there has been a loss of 9,309; 2,285 are under siege in various places, and in 24 towns and villages the churches and schools, with the unfortunate women and children who had taken refuge in them, were burned or otherwise destroyed. At the same time the Bibles and Hymn books were dishonoured and trampled under the feet of the Turks.

Another phase of the situation pressed itself on the attention of the meeting, i.e., the situation as it affects the entire Armenian people. Carefully prepared and very conservative estimates show that in 1914 in the above mentioned three cities and all other towns and villages, there were 195,200 Armenian inhabitants. Under deportation 93,500 perished. After the return of the survivors from exile 13,525 persons have been massacred, so that in these three cities and surrounding villages, which suffered little in comparison with many other places, 107,000 persons have been cruelly done to death by their fellow men during the past six years. This colossal loss is in addition to the terrible evils arising from moral degradation and disease that have affected so many thousands of the people.

Is there any other nation that has been subjected to any greater loss or suffered so much at the hands of their oppressors in the period of the great war and following the armistice? In addition to this, although the entire nation is in daily fear, 20,500 people are now isolated and besieged by the Turkish "cheta" bands. For weeks they have been fighting for their lives, while the French forces have been unable or unwilling to break through and come to their rescue. This is the present situation, and we know not what the future has in store.

We beg to call your attention to some of the subjects discussed:—

1. One question that absorbed much of the attention of the meeting was the condition of our people who are being subjected to siege, such as

REFUGEE CHILDREN.

Hadjin, Hassan Beyli, Marash, etc. Alas! the sad pity of it. The meeting not knowing what to do or say, was in dire perplexity as to whom they might appeal or against whom they might raise a protest.

2. The second was the sorrowful condition of the thousands of widows and orphans, especially the younger widows who have little more than the rags on their backs and who are to-day homeless. Unable to find any solution of this pathetic situation, the sense of the moral deterioration already evident and the threatening danger of still greater deterioration and even degradation, and on the other hand, the blunting of the finer sensibilities of those who witness this condition without adequate means of rendering assistance and bettering them burned itself into the minds and hearts of all present.

3. Another question of pressing importance was the fact of 20,000 men of the 70,000 Armenian people of Adana, Tarsus, Mersine and Deort-Yol, who, because of the prostration of all enterprise, are for the most part idle. They wait in vain hope for more favourable conditions, and are denied even the black, half-baked bread doled out to the widows.

4. The conference discussed the question of the high cost of living; the increase in price of the necessities of life—risen to four or five times the pre-war prices; the scarcity of many of these necessities (caused mainly by the interruption of communication due to the operations of the "Cheta" bands); the passing of the time for making preparation for this year's harvest, and the inevitable scarcity of provisions which may lead to famine.

5. Another question of very serious and sinister importance is that of the continuance in governmental office of men who have been guilty of repeated criminal acts, and especially the enrolling as gendarmes of men who have been arrested and condemned by regular process of law. For better safety and tranquility very considerable numbers of Armenians are taking refuge in Cyprus, Smyrna, and a goodly number leaving for America—a movement that is the result of hopeless discouragement and apprehension. This movement is greatly encouraged by both Turkish and French governments.

6. Deep concern was expressed because of the lack of Scriptures and other religious books, and because no provision was being made for the publication of periodical literature with books and tracts in order to help stem the tide of worldliness and immorality growing space in the presence of this indefinite and uncertain and unknowable political situation.

7. At the same time emphasis was put upon the fact that aside from the Armenians, there were two groups in this sad plight that should arouse pity. One of these groups are the Turks themselves, because, while the injury to the Armenians is material, temporary and earthly, the loss to the Turks is spiritual, moral and eternal. Their virtues and abominations are well known to the world.

But the pity of the situation appeared not alone in the sufferings of the Armenians and the atrocities committed by the Turks, but also in the attitude and action of the Allied powers. Where are the prime ministers and other orators who proclaimed as one of the objects of the war, the freedom and protection of the smaller and subject nations? Their pronouncements were to our thirsty souls as the rain to parched ground in famine time. The war had scarcely ended when the masks fell from their faces, and one for his own personal interests, another for political aggrandizement, and yet another torn by party disputes left us in the claws of our cruel oppressors, always ready to renew the terrible massacres. Are these the nations of such tender sentiments as to enact strict laws for the protection of beasts of burden, and to prevent cruelty to even cats and dogs? How can they be satisfied to stand as spectators, watching the sacrifice of human beings bearing the image of God the Creator? The Pharisees who tithed mint and cumin were not able to escape the denunciation of Jesus the Christ. You should protect the animals, you should also save the people. Although in former years your iron-clad warships could not sail up the Euphrates to the mountains of Ararat, the world-war as a flood has carried your dreadnoughts to the mountain tops and your soldiers to the seven hills of Constantinople. Can you still find excuse? While we felt deeply depressed at these thoughts we remembered that the peoples forming the Entente were not so boundlessly selfish as the Entente governments. We remembered that multitudes of hearts amongst those peoples sympathized with us, and mingled their tears with ours. It is because of their generous goodwill that so many of our widows and orphans are being cared for. The Relief Commission is demonstrating their active and generous sympathy with us. It is impossible for us to express our deep and heartfelt gratitude. However, there are two thoughts we make bold to mention in this connection. Instead of organizing a hospital for the care of those who fall over the precipice, would it not be better to build a parapet on the edge of the road to prevent the fall? Would this not be more economical and humanitarian? Would it not be better to destroy the factory that continually produces the widows and orphans, than to make preparations for their care? If you do not get wearied in caring for them, the Turks, on various pretexts, will not weary in the matter of furnishing new widows and orphans for your care. The Turks are ready to teach their children as is proved by the fact that a Turkish boy of eight years of age was encouraged to stab to death, with a dagger, an infant girl of eighteen months named Gourgee. This occurred in the village of Tungerli on January 25th, 1920.

May it not be said that if you do not influence your government by your unselfishness and sense of honour, the extreme selfishness of your government may destroy your self-respect and honour? No government can be much higher or lower than the people it represents.

Shining through this gloom there is a bright ray that inspires our hearts with hope and courage. That hope appears in this, that there are marked indications that a deep desire for the open Bible has been aroused in the hearts of the Armenian people. It can be said with emphasis that the facilities offered, and the appeals make for the teaching of the Bible in many churches, for using it in our orphanages and schools as a text book, and in many instances, the use of it in the family life as a source of comfort and strength passes anything that has appeared in former years. The majority realise that the great reason for the world-war was the sacrilegious lack of honour towards the principles set forth therein, and that those principles afford the only hope of establishing universal peace and goodwill. There is a definitely growing acknowledgment of the worthy purpose and respect for the aims and method of the American Mission and missionaries which is well deserved.

By effectively entering this opening door into the minds and hearts of the Armenian people, we may find a way to enter another door of even greater importance, and that is the duty and privilege of preaching the Gospel to the Moslems. Our firm conviction is that there is one nation that stands first in the duty and privilege and capacity of preaching the Gospel to the Turks, and that is the Armenian. Through the past six centuries we have studied the language of the Turks, their customs and their moral weaknesses, as well as their strength, and we understand their mentality. We have been continually subjected to their oppressive rule; we have been massacred by them; we have been exposed to even worse treatment than massacre.

As the Saviour, despised by the world and was crucified and rose from the dead, won the right to proclaim the truth and be proclaimed, the Armenian must be acknowledged as without competitor in the work of evangelizing the Turk. However, there is one condition, that condition is the resurrection of the Armenian nation. If this may not be with the goodwill of the Allied powers, they must at least acknowledge that this nation has been walking in the valley of the shadow of death, and massacred under the folds of the Tri-colour, the significance of which is "Liberty, equality, and fraternity." The nation must be raised and reconstructed for noble service. We do not ask if this is possible. We have faith in God that He is not only able, but willing to vouchsafe new life to this people that, while at the door of death, is yet alive, unwilling to die, and is wrestling with death and for new life. The Lord has already called it to life. Behold! This nation, though it is "bound hand and foot with grave clothes, and the face bound about with a napkin" with yearning desires, strives towards life and service. But the critical question is, is there a nation or government with nobility of spirit sufficient to render assistance and service to God in loosing the grave clothes and the napkin—the ceremonies of the grave (Turkish oppression and outrage) from these people and let them go forward to new life and hope? It is as noble to give life as it is to live.

May it not be that your nation render such life-giving service?

On behalf of the Pastors and Preachers present in the Conference,

Yours very sincerely,
S.M.

How the Missionaries Spend their Time.

By MISS KATHERINE BREDEMUS, of Hadjin.

IN one of my first letters from America after reaching the field a friend wrote, "I just wonder what you are doing this morning. I can't picture you at all."

A missionary's life is many-sided, and if we should endeavour to tell in detail all that we do it would be a strange conglomeration. No two days are spent just alike. While it is true that each one of our Circle has different duties assigned him, we never know what a day will bring forth.

One morning at family worship I prayed, "Lord, we have our plans for the day's work, but often the unexpected touches our lives. Give us a heart preparation for the duties and responsibilities that await us this day." God changed our plans for that day, and much of the time was given to listening to the heartrending tales of the friends who called on us.

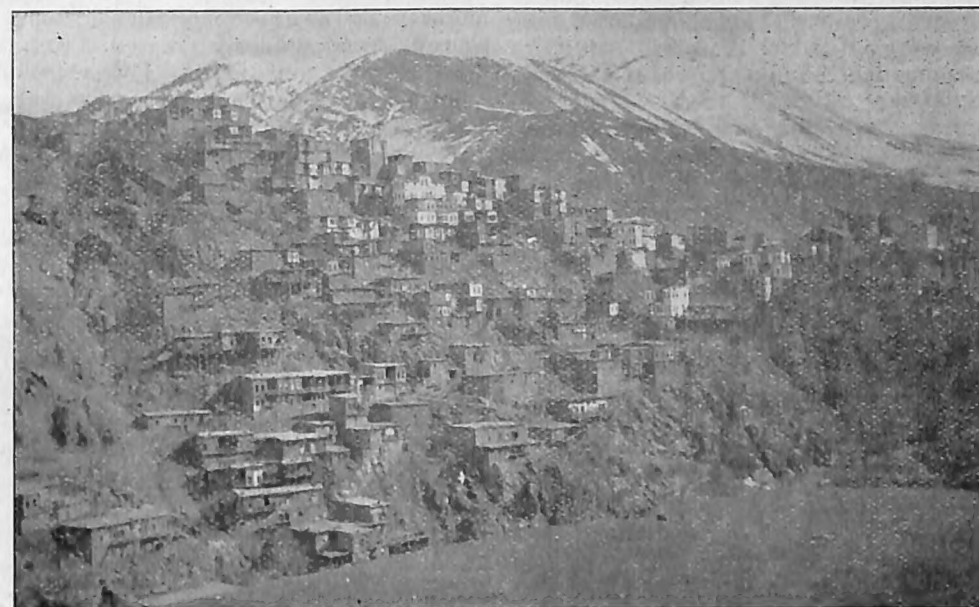

Shortly after breakfast I was called downstairs and found blind Surpoohe waiting for me. She is not a member of the Protestant church, but a Gregorian who knows God and has proved Him again and again. She and a weak-minded sister who must be looked after like a babe, are the only members of the family who are left. They were among the few in Hadjin who were not exiled, although they suffered indescribable hardships.

Their home was burnt and for weeks they were on the street. But Surpoohe's faith in God never wavered, although for days at a time they had nothing to eat. She told me that one night when conditions were at their worst she had a vision of Christ.

A widow and her three ragged children were the next lot to whom we gave some time. Their story is almost unbelievable, and they were sorely in need of sympathy, help and encouragement. The eldest child, Garabed, has been adopted into our family. He is a fine, bright-eyed, manly little fellow, and seems very happy in his new home.

The next one who attracted my attention was the son of Esther, our former Bible woman. This boy and his relatives have had their full share of suffering. When Turkey entered the war there was a relationship of nearly a hundred. Out of this number about a HADJIN.

Arrayed in white, the sympathizing Christ appeared to her and assured her that she would not be exiled, and that her missionary friends would some day return to Hadjin.

Who knows but what the faithful intercession of some of these "little ones" had much to do with our safe return to this land!

From this interview we hurried over to the service with our family of orphans. The subject that morning was the miracle of the loaves and fishes. We rejoice that the same Christ who blessed the loaves and fishes, thus feeding the hungry multitude, still blesses the little and it becomes enough.

The Turkish Peace Treaty.

A BRIEF summary of the main points in the Treaty of Peace as handed to the Turkish delegates is herewith given.

Constantinople is to remain the capital of Turkey, providing the terms of the treaty are loyally carried out.

The Bosphorus and the Dardanelles are to be under control of a Straits Commission, to be composed of one delegate each from the United States (if she dozen remain. The Turk has done his work thoroughly.

Among other visitors were Marta Hanum and her widowed daughter, whose husband was one of our former workers in Everek. This Protestant family is among the few who have returned from their wanderings almost intact.

Preaching, visiting, personal work, letter-writing and looking after the sick, as also numberless duties in connection with orphanage, educational, industrial and relief work, are some of the things that take up a missionary's time.

Bi-Monthly Letter, June, 1920.

accepts), England, France, Italy, Japan, Russia (if she becomes a member of the League of Nations), Greece, Roumania, and Bulgaria (if she too joins the League). The powers of this Commission extend to all measures necessary to keeping the Straits free and open in peace or in war. It is entirely free from local control.

Smyrna and the adjacent territory is under Greek rule, but Turkish sovereignty is indicated by the flying of the Ottoman flag on one of the outer forts of the city. A local legislature will be formed, which after five years may ask the League of Nations for full incorporation in the Greek Kingdom.

Thrace, as far as the Chatalja lines, and the islands of the Aegean go to Greece, which gives guarantees to protect the rights of the racial and religious minorities, especially in Adrianople.

Turkey is to recognize Armenia as free and independent, and accept the arbitration of the President of the United States as to its borders in the vilayets of Erzroum, Trebizond, Van, and Bitlis, and as to access for Armenia to the sea. Mutual agreements are provided for, safeguarding the rights of minorities.

Syria and Mesopotamia are recognized as independent States, which are to be administered under mandates as long as necessary. The boundaries are to be fixed by the principal Allied Powers. Palestine is also put under a mandate, the creation of a national home for the Jews being reaffirmed.

Turkey recognizes the Hedjaz as an independent State, and renounces all claims to Egypt, the Soudan and Cyprus.

Caucasus Relief.

Batoum, June 12th, 1920.

Received July 2nd, 1920.

Dear Miss Russell,

You will please find enclosed report concerning the expenditure of the £550 10s. which I received in January in the form of a cheque No. L—3151 on the Farmer's Loan and Trust Company.

Owing to threatening political conditions, the larger part of our Near East Relief personnel were withdrawn from the Caucasus before there was an opportunity of making a retailed report, so I trust the report enclosed will be satisfactory.

You may rest assured that the money you sent reached those who were in need, and was wisely expended. We had an earnest personnel in the Erivan District, and I tried to make it plain to them just exactly how the money should be used, according to your instructions.

Everything is looking very gloomy here once more, and there is a possibility of the Caucasus being shut off again from communication with the outside world. A wonderful relief organization has been built up during the past winter.

Some few of us are going to remain and try to keep the organization together, hoping for better days in the future. I trust that you will continue your sympathetic aid until the better days comes, for which we have together so many years been waiting.

Cordially yours,

E. A. YARROW.

The expenditure was as follows:—

Are Foreign Missions Worth While?

By GEORGE L. RICHARDS, M.D.

Dr. Richards, who answers herewith the question at the head of this article, a question which in each generation people ask afresh, is a widely known medical specialist, has travelled extensively, and is a keen observer. He went to Turkey in charge of medical personnel and supplies for the Near East Relief, early in 1919. While there he visited all our stations in Anatolia and made tours of inspection in the Caucasus and in Thrace.—Editor.

So far as I could ascertain in my nine months' visit last year, the only progress which has been made in the interior of Turkey for the past hundred years has been made by missionaries. While the great Powers have been playing the diplomatic game of grab, the Armenian, the only hope of the land so far as native population is concerned, has suffered frequent massacres. All this time the American missionaries have been really doing something for these people, not in the way of religious proselyting, as is so often claimed, but in the introduction of that practical gospel which makes for better living, both material and moral. Out of the missionary spirit and atmosphere have grown such institutions as Robert College and Constantinople College. It was not, however, through such institutions as these that I wanted to judge our missions, but in the interior fields and far from the cities.

I wonder if you have ever stayed over night in a Turkish hotel or in a wayside khan? Well, if you had, you would know with what animal pests one has to deal. I have sometimes said that the chief products of Turkey were flies, fleas, and mosquitoes. After a stay in such places, you hunt for a mission compound. The first real mission station which I visited was at Talas, near Cesarea. Arriving at dusk, after a weary ride of 110 miles over an arid district, without a tree by the wayside and with an abundance of alkali dust, we rode up a mountain side looking just about as arid as the rest, except that there were some vineyards on the slope.

We arrived at a gate in a high wall and rang the bell; the gate opened, and wonderful transformation! We were at once in New England, in the summer, with a green lawn, a miniature fountain, trees, and a tame stork to meet us, together with cordial greetings from Mr. Wingate, Miss Loughridge, and all the rest. For real hospitality the Waldorf Astoria cannot touch it. And then a simple supper of well-cooked native dishes, and after that a real bed and bath; yes, a bath in a tin tub, with at least two pails of hot water allowed. To be sure, we had to take turns, and we must not waste the water; but compare this with the bare floor of a Turkish khan, on which you lay your blankets, only to be devoured the night through. No one needs to ask me if I believe in foreign missions! And then, later in the evening, when we gathered around Mr. Wingate at the piano we sang the fine old hymns of the church; or sat quietly and read the Literary Digest, a bit old, to be sure, but recent to us. I say once more, it is not necessary to ask me if I believe in missions.

Let it be thought that I am stressing one phase and one only, let me tell you that after I had been to see Miss Clara Richmond and her kindergarten and her soup kitchen; had visited the orphanages, had seen the boys' school—a monument to Mr. Wingate's enterprise; had seen and operated in the Talas hospital, built largely as a result of Dr. W. S. Dodd's energy; and then had learned what a small proportion the cost bore to the output, I became enthusiastic. Here was a genuine oasis in a barren land, where literally the desert was being made to blossom as the rose.

If you have ever been in a native Turkish village, either in Thrace or in Anatolia, the contrast in it before and after the advent of the missionary will be very evident. Everything around the mission station shows progress. Homes improve, living conditions become better, people begin to want things; agriculture improves, and then trade follows.

It is said trade follows the flag. It is my observation that trade follows the missionary. I wish the several governments would now and then give to the various missionary Boards the cost of a battleship, which becomes obsolete in a few years anyway, and let the Boards put the same amount of money into their schools. Do you know what would happen? About the time when the battleship would normally be scrapped, large dividends, not only in improved intelligence and better lives, but in actual dollars and cents in the way of trade, would begin and would continue in increasing proportion. The first fanning machines for cleaning wheat in Turkey were introduced by the missionaries; and, if I am not mistaken, the first electric light plant was also introduced by one of the missionary colleges.

Are they a long-haired, solemn group? Not much! Do you happen to know Henry Riggs, at Harpoot—a live wire if there ever was one—who, not content with caring for 4,000 orphans at Harpoot, gets out patents on various devices, and can drive a Ford automobile in the most impossible places? I know, for I have ridden with him! And there are the women, the really great women who hobnob with the governors, and now and then protect them from their own people. There is Miss Graffam, at Sivas, who walked to Malatia, at the time of the deportations, trying to save her girls; Miss Vaughn, of Hadjin, and Miss Cushman, of Konia, all of whom stayed at their posts right through the war; red-blooded women, whom to know is an honour, and who, themselves, seem devoid of fear. The only real, live propositions in Asia Minor to-day are the missionaries.

But time would fail me to tell of others—of Dr. George White, president of Anatolia College; of Dr. Jesse Marden, at Marsovan, a fine representative of the medical profession, known for hundreds of miles around; of Dr. Mark Ward, at Harpoot; of the work at Mardin, at Adana, at Oorfa, at Marash, and at Aintab, where young Dr. Shepard is a worthy successor of an illustrious father.

Unless we are going to live in the narrow rut and inside of our own hut, like hermits; if we are in any way to be our brother's keeper, then we must be interested in foreign missions.

Armenia: Its Future and its Possibilities.

By BOGHOS PASHA NUBAR.

Boghos Pasha Nubar, who contributes this interesting article, is the Grand Old Man of Armenia, and has for years fought the battle of his oppressed countrymen. He is the son of Nubar Pasha, the greatest of Egyptian Prime Ministers, and though now his efforts on behalf of Armenia have kept him much in Europe he still maintains his connection with Egypt.

Of all the countries which have suffered from the Great War, Armenia has suffered most of all. The whole world knows of the terrible massacres which the Turks have perpetrated upon my fellow-countrymen—massacres which to-day are still continuing.

During the war the Allied Powers had their hands too full to be able to do more than promise relief to the Armenians when the Turkish Empire was overthrown. Now that consummation has been achieved, and what remains of the Armenian people looks to the Allies to make the promises good. And especially do the Armenians look to Great Britain.

SCHEMES OF REFORM.

For Great Britain has been intimately associated with the Armenian question ever since the year 1878, when the Cyprus Convention was concluded between the British and Ottoman Governments. By the terms of that Convention Great Britain undertook to assist Turkey in securing internal reform, especially in the lot of the native Christian populations, and in return for her assistance Great Britain acquired the Island of Cyprus as a coaling station.

Since that year many schemes of reform have been drawn up, either by England alone, or by England in conjunction with France and Russia. But it was one thing to propose reforms and another to induce the "incorrigible Turk" to carry them out.

The World War has simplified the problem by eliminating many of the elements which had hitherto prevented things being done. Certain Powers, whose policy was to obstruct reform, have disappeared, and never in the past have the omens been so propitious for a national revival of Armenia as they are to-day.

THE NEW REPUBLIC.

Nor should it be supposed that the Armenians have been content to wait idly until Europe should help them. They have been helping themselves. In the face of tremendous difficulties the Armenian people have proclaimed an independent state in the territory of Russian Trans-Caucasia, which, although historically Armenian, had never been acknowledged as such in any international agreement. At the present moment it is difficult to say what the exact boundaries of Turkish Armenia are likely to be.

Two principles, however, must be born in mind if Armenia is to have scope for political and economic progress. One is that she must have direct and unrestricted access to the sea. The second is, that she should have a frontier line of the most easily defensive character.

MINERAL RESOURCES.

From the earliest times to the present day Asia Minor and Armenia have been regarded as rich in mineral resources and other wealth. Great trade routes cross each other from East to West and West to East. Engineering experts who have surveyed parts of the country believe it to contain extensive deposits of coal, iron, copper, and other minerals. Even under the obstructive rule of the Turk, coal mines were exploited in the provinces of Erzerum, Van and Trebizond. The great copper mines of Argana-Maden in the Armenian Taurus have been worked for centuries past, and still continue to supply the needs of the country itself, and to be exported in large quantities; but above all Armenia is an agricultural country, and when it prospers in the near future, as the Armenians hope and pray that it will, its chief industries will be wheat-growing and cattle-raising.

Without exaggeration I may say that the construction of roads and railways will make Armenia one of the great granaries of the world. Within, at the most, forty years Armenia and the adjacent territories should be one of the great markets for export of raw material and food supplies, and, at the same time, one of the greatest importers of European manufactured goods.

A SPORTSMAN'S PARADISE.

One other aspect I think I may deal with since

"Land and Water" is, I know, much read by sportsmen. For Armenia is a sportsman's paradise; its lakes and rivers teem with salmon and trout, its hillsides abound with partridges and other species of game. The mountaineer can explore the marvellous peaks of Ararat, where the Ark grounded. A yachtsman can while away pleasant days sailing along our coasts. Under the Turkish blight Armenia has remained a sealed book to the civilised world. We want to make it one of the world's playgrounds.

The above has been reprinted by kind permission of the Editor of "Land and Water."

Appeal from Miss Davies.

Beyrout, June 17th, 1920.

Dear Miss Russell,

I am glad to be able to write you now that I have arrived safely in Beyrout. I do so long for home news. I was fortunate to get a boat for Beyrout after waiting five days at Alexandria, and when we reached Port Said I was pleased to find that Miss Eckroyd who is also going up to Brumana joined our boat. I am rejoicing every moment that the journey is over and that I am really back in this sad land, for its need is something tremendous, the situation is more grave than it has ever been before. A letter reached me yesterday from Dr. Chambers, of Adana; he is heart-broken about Hadjin, which is now again in the hands of the Turks. Adana, he says, is most unsafe, and they do not know what may happen any moment. Marash is still cut off, though I had news from the Near East people that Miss Salmond is safe, and her broken leg improving nicely. Aintab is in a fearful condition. Miss Frearson came here last week, and with two American workers brought down the children; they came down with great difficulty, but they have not come any too soon, for a letter came to-day from Miss Foreman, an American missionary in Aintab, pleading for us to do all we could to get the remaining Armenians removed, so Miss Frearson and I went at once to the British Consul, but he is not able to interfere, as these places were given over to the French. However, he gave us a letter of introduction to the French General, and we have arranged an interview with him; I will let you know the result.

I had expected to return to a troubled land, but I had not any idea that I would find things in the terrible state they are, and although I have only been here five days, I have seen enough misery to fill a life-time. It was so pathetic to visit the Camp where those from Aintab are placed for the present. They have been hunted about from place to place for so long, and still relief for them seems as far off as ever. How I wish I could take five hundred of them to Brumana and start an orphanage for them, and once more give them a chance to live. . . . I quite see now that the best thing to do is to get them away from Adana, Aintab, and the other regions where this reign of terror is going on. The Lebanon is safe enough, so we must just pray that ways may be opened for them to come here.

I had a letter from Mr. Nilson, of Tarsus, asking me, indeed urging me, to go there and begin work as soon as possible, but the situation being as it is of course that is out of the question. . . . May God give you special wisdom to act in these days of need and difficulty. . . . We were not able to get an interview with the French General, so we decided to have a French letter written to him explaining the difficulties in Aintab, and asking for an escort to bring out the people.

Yours sincerely,

ANNIE DAVIES.

Prices in Smyrna.

QUOTING from a private letter of one of the American Board members of our Smyrna station force, we give the following:—

"Prices here are fearful. They are from 600 to 1,000 per cent. higher than before we left to go to America, and have risen greatly since October. One egg costs nine cents; it was one cent. Milk is almost beyond our reach. We have a pound and a half of meat a week, for the price of meat has jumped from 24 cents to $1.25 an oke. (An oke is two and one-half pounds.) This is for the cheapest meat obtainable in Smyrna. Here are a few articles as they were priced in 1915 and as they are now—in United States coinage:—

Article	1915	1920
Eggs, each,	$.01	$.09
Bread, loaf,	.08	.25
Butter, per lb.,	.24	1.25
Sugar, per lb.,	.08	.35
Milk, per qt.,	.08	.40
Cheese, per lb.,	.10	.80
Kerosene oil per oke,	.04	.20
Wood,	.24	2.00

"Coal is now $75 a ton. All clothing has jumped to at least five times what it was."

CABLE FROM MAJOR NICOL, BEIRUT, TO NEAR EAST RELIEF.

FURTHER news Aintab indicates that removal of orphans to south inevitable. Our large trucks proceeding Aintab carrying in supplies bringing out orphans to Killis. May be compelled bring large number Beirut. Making tentative preparations. Armenian orphanage Aleppo notified withdrawal army aid this month. We may have to support them numbering fifteen hundred. Letter by caravan from Wilson Marash April fifteenth reports all well asking for six thousand pounds monthly and workers to relieve those leaving. Doctor Bell arrived Marash. Two men waiting at Aleppo to proceed. Wilson wishes American friends notified all well. Prices in Marash not unreasonable. Nationalist control prevents personnel writing in English. Above information sent in Turkish. Trusted Armenian from Urfa reports all well there April twenty-eight. Unless political situation clears Committee must begin work all over. Possible developments involve greatly increased expenditure next six months. Statement in your cable nine that Beirut area on orphanage basis modified by extensive new refugees problems north of Tripoli and continued unrest.

TURKEY STILL HANGS IN THE BALANCE.

THE Allies have handed the Treaty they have devised for Turkey to the latter's representatives, who came from Constantinople to receive it. These representatives have now borne it off for presentation to the government at Constantinople, where it will be carefully studied and discussed. What the result will be no one can foretell. The document provides plainly for the dismemberment of Turkey and the division of the larger part of her territory among the Powers. Various degrees of authority or limitations of authority on the part of these supervising Powers are indicated, but a practical overlordship seems to be allowed. An independent Armenia is projected, of which President Wilson has been asked to determine the boundary.

Just how all the provisions of the Treaty are to be brought to pass does not appear, save that it is suggested the League of Nations shall assume certain responsibilities in the matter, and apparently the Supreme Council of the Allies will hold final authority in its own hands. But by what forces it will compel Turkey either to accept the Treaty or to carry out its terms, if it is accepted, does not appear.

—Missionary Herald.

TEMPEST-TOSSED AND THREATENING.

MEANWHILE, things seem to be going from bad to worse over wide areas and among all the peoples of that unhappy land. Even from the Caucasus region, the reports are very discouraging. The situation is becoming so disordered and menacing that the Near East Relief has felt compelled to order women workers out from the Republic of Armenia, though one of them, Miss Shane, heroine of Bitlis, resigned her position with the Relief Committee that she might be free to stay, where she was determined to remain and take her chances with the people of the land.

Recent cable dispatches report that fighting is still in progress in Cilicia between the Turks and the French. The Near East Relief contemplate having to remove its orphans from Cilicia, perhaps so far as Beirut. Some 3,000 have already been sent to Cyprus. Unless the political situation clears, the Committee feels it will have to begin its work all over again, and that greatly increased expenditures may be involved.

Word as to the welfare of missionaries and relief workers is cheering, and to the effect that they are all safe and well. Almost all the centre have been heard from: Marash, Hadjin, Oorfa, and Aintab in Cilicia, and Sivas, Marsovan, Harpoot, and Samsoun in Anatolia. With patience and with courage the workers keep at such tasks of relief, sympathy, and counsel as each day brings, hoping and praying that better times may soon come. It is a truly dreadful situation, with so many dark and disheartening factors that it is a constant test of faith to endure and press on. But it is God's world there as here, and a way out of the present distress will be found.

—Missionary Herald.

GRATEFUL THANKS!

As all our readers know, the cost of postage has again increased; therefore the Secretary is not able to acknowledge every gift by sending a letter of thanks. Will friends kindly note that all gifts are very welcome, and if they only receive a printed notice "With the Committee's Grateful Thanks," instead of a letter, that it is on account of the heavy expense incurred by the increased rate of postage?
